Q4 2011

- Economics
 - Global economic growth continues. Japan's supply chain problems seem to be alleviated. China seems to have managed to "soft economic landing". U.S. growth will continue to be stronger through the 4th quarter.
 - While the world focused on the European Sovereign debt issues, better U.S. economic growth went almost unnoticed.
 - Third QDP grew at 2.50%. Much better than the two previous quarters. The fourth quarter is likely to be as good.
 - Consumer spending has risen solidly the last two months in spite of dipping confidence. Folks with jobs seem a little less bitter about losing their jobs and are spending more. Some surge in retail sales.
 - Job growth is trending better with housing showing signs of life, although it may be a little too early to call a turn.
 - Look for no double dip recession. There is enough strength in the economy to prevent a relapse.
- Equities
 - While our target of 1400 on the S&P seemed a little out of reach in early September, it now looks like a real possibility by year end. Stocks currently trade at 15 times earnings. Given current interest rates and inflation, the market can easily support 18.7 times earnings or up 25% from here.
 - We continue to see solid earnings reports from the S&P 500. We have lowered our earnings growth expectations, but they still remain a respectable 15% for the full year. Revenues continue to outpace and balance sheets are very lean.
 - Stocks remain a much better value than bonds right now.
- Fixed Income
 - Bonds in general seem to be overvalued at this point. Real yields (current yield less inflation) are at their lowest levels since the 1970's.
 - We still favor intermediate duration with the prospect of low rates for an extended period.
 - Opportunities are harder to come by these days. Certain areas in the corporate market and fixed America funds for tax- exempt accounts over some value.
 - Municipal offers solid value as some shorter term rates are actually higher than corresponding taxable rates.
 - Avoid Treasuries and risky priced mortgages.

Asset Allocation Process

Why is asset allocation important?

- Over 90% of the variability of returns can be explained by asset allocation. The remaining variability is explained by market timing and security selection.
- Asset allocation provides an accurate framework in which to judge the risk/return tradeoff.
- Asset allocation provides an accurate framework in which to judge success.
